

easyJet desires to employ 1,000 brand-new pilots – interested?

easyjet found or type unknown

Photo: easyJet

Reading Time: minute

The low-cost provider easyJet desires to employ 1,000 brand-new pilots within the next 5 years.

For the veryfirst time consideringthat the start of the pandemic, easyJet is reestablishing its pilot training plan and is motivating everybody to thinkabout a pilot profession.

Johan Lundgren, CEO of easyJet, stated: “We are pleased to be resuming our pilot training program onceagain for the veryfirst time giventhat the pandemic hit and will see us hire over 1,000 brand-new pilots in the coming years.

To bringin prospects, easyJet began a brand-new project with captain Iris de Kan and 2 senior FOs at easyJet – Nina Le and Aaron Moseley. Captain Iris de Kan, a Mum-of-two, is seen in one of the advertisements with five-year-old child Kiki, and easyJet stated it highlights that individuals with great multitasking abilities can endupbeing outstanding pilots. Former gymnast and now a senior veryfirst officer with easyJet, Nina Le, carriesout a split leap on the tarmac, showcasing her impressive responses and hand-eye coordination. easyJet senior veryfirst officer Aaron Moseley, a previous resident DJ, chose to train for a brand-new occupation 7 years earlier. His hands-on useful abilities have allowed him to switch records for runways.

“easyJet has long promoted higher variety in the flight deck and this series of advertisements objectives to emphasize the remarkable breadth of abilities our pilots have and program that pilots can be discovered in all strolls of life, in a quote to bringin more varied prospects.

“We continue to focus on difficult gendered stereotypes of the profession having doubled the number of woman pilots flying with us in current years.

Source: easyJet

Source: easyJet desires to employ 1,000 brand-new pilots – interested?